LEGAL BACKGROUND

a. For years a number of Federal agencies and departments have received special authorities to hire Consultants and Experts under specific conditions. These conditions were usually fairly well spelled out in the authorizing legislation which sometimes was enabling legislation, but usually was appropriation legislation. With these authorizations being given to individual agencies, the responsibility for administering them was necessarily assumed by the individual agencies.

b. In Public Law 600, 79th Congress, approved August 2, 1946, a game eral authorization was given Federal agencies and departments in the hirium of Experts and Consultants. Section 15 of Public Law 600 states:

"The head of any department, when authorized in an appropriation or other Act, may produre the temporary (not in excess of one year) or intermittent services of experts or consultants or organizations thereof, including stenographic reporting services, by contract, and in such cases such services shall be without regard to the civil-pervice and classification laws (but as to agencies subject to the Classification Act at rates not in excess of the per dismequivalent of the highest rate payable under the Classification Act, unless other rates are specifically provided in the appropriation or other law) and, except in the case of stemographic reporting services by organizations, without regard to section 3709, Revised Statutes, as amended by this Act,"

Practically all Fodoral agencies have authority to hire Exports and Consultants under this Section of Public Law 600. It now appears to be standard legislative practice to include an authorisation for such appears in all enabling legislation for new Fodoral agencies.

Sorvice Commission has been required to make inspections of Expert and Consultant appointments in various Federal agencies and to report its findings to the President.

THE PROBLEMS IN EXPERT AND CONSULTANT APPOINTMENTS

Down through the years many problems have arisen in administering the various Consultant and Expert authorizations. Federal agencies and departments sought solutions to their individual problems usually by securing a decision of the Comptroller General. As a result of this practice the number of Comptroller General decisions regarding appointments of Consultants and Experts are numerous. Since many of these decisions are given in consideration with a specific authorization for Consultant and Expert appointments for a special purpose in an individual department or agency, there is always the question as to whether the Comptroller General's decision applies to similar appointments being made in other departments or agencies under other authorizations.

Examples of some of the major ereas where administrative problems oxist are:

- different approaches to the appointment precess. In some agencies, all Generates and Experts are given "Excepted appointments" and the Standard Form 50 is used as the official appointing decimate. In others, the comployment of Consultants and Experts is considered as a contract and a formal contract form is prepared. In still others, the comployment decided as a priof letter of employment which eites the employee's name, title, salary, dates of employment and a brief paragraph on the legal authority for such appointment.
- b. There is very little agreement between the various agencies and departments on definitions of and distinctions between Consultants and Experts. In some agencies the terms Consultant and Expert are considered almost symmetry and are used interchangeably. In others an attempt has been made to make a rigid and clear-out distinction between the two terms.
- e. Probably one of the most confused areas and most difficult areas to administer is to distinguish between "temporary" and "intermittent" Consultants in terms of Section 15 of Public Law 600. Under legislation and intermittent Consultant can draw per diem and travel between his home and place of business. He also can receive retired pay from a branch of the aread services while being paid as an intermittent Consultant with a receive real agency. The problem in this area is determining an adequate out-off point between intermittent and full time Consultants (i.e., if a person works 15 days a month consistently, is he full time or intermittent?).
- d. The use of Consultants and Experts to perform classified duties prosents a problem. Many agencies have operated under the assumption that an Expert may occupy a classified position. A Comptroller Concret Decision, & B-103199, dated June 7, 1951, to the Secretary of Commerce rules that in certain instances in the Department of Commerce this cannot be done, but it is not clear from such a decision whether this applies throughout all Federal agencies.
 - o. Some departments and agencies have determined that Experts and Consultants are not covered by the Scalal Scaurity Act as amended by Public Law 734. Blat Congress, since they are contract employees. Other departments and agencies do not consider Consultants and Experts as contract employees and have made the employees serving under such appelatments subject to Secial Security.
 - f. There are immumerable problems in commection with Consultants and Experts carring leave, receiving overtime pay and the like. Many of these problems have been resolved fairly clearly through Comptroller General decisions, but again, it takes considerable research to find appropriate decisions to ensure all such questions.

IV. FINDINGS

Findings in the two reports as discussed in the Committee brought out the following tentative conclusions and recommendations:

- a. Inconsistencies exist not only among the departments and agencies, but even among the operating bureaus and divisions within the same department.
- b. The Committee agreed that no step in the interest of greater uniformity should be taken which would impade the agencies in the hiring and processing of highly-trained personnel whose services are of a unique nature and therefore demand special treatment. The essence of the case is that Experts and Consultants are employed in order to bring an agency certain knowledges, skills, or perspective which the agency itself does not have on a regular basis.
- 6. In accordance with this view, it was thought that amendments of legislation would not be the enswer, for the present at least.
- d. Some material on compensation of Experts and Consultants has been put in draft form by the General Accounting Office and will be reviewed shortly by the Committee.
- e. In view of the fact that Consultant and Expert appointments are rather common in many of the Federal departments and agencies and in view of the fact that many such appointments are made in new agencies at the time they are just beginning to establish their policies and presedures and have few agency guide lines in writing, it appears that the Civil Service Commission could render a real service if it would issue advisory material, as guide lines to agencies, setting forth the basis legal restrictions currently existing on Expert and Comsultant appointments.

The original subcoundttee, beaded by Mr. Doster, thought that not only is this a service which the Commission sould render, but to those agencies whose Expert and Consultant appointments are now subject to Commission inspection, it is felt that the issuance of basic regulations and guide lines is an obligation of the Commission. It is not felt that the Commission should operate an inspection program in an area where it has not published adequate guide lines for the agencies.

The Job Evaluation and Pay Committee on the other hand expressly stated that such materials should be informational and not mandatory. It would be expected of course that the Committee and a representative of General Assounting Office would work with the Commission in preparing such guides.

Recommendation

It is proposed that the Council endorse the idea that the Commission and the General Accounting Office work with the Committee in the preparation of advisory material as guide lines to departments and agencies on the employment and compensation of Experts and Consultants.

General Instructions

Placing the right employee in the job best suited for his qualifications is the aim of any successful Career Management Program. The inservice training of employees selected for career development is a corollary. The Career Management Report is designed expressly to assist in achieving these two objectives within this organization. These reports will be prepared by the reporting official in conjunction with the performance ratings (90 days after entrance on duty, 6 months after any change in grade, change in job series, and annually thereafter) and will be routed through supervisory channels for forwarding to the Personnel Office. The reporting officer is defined as the employee's immediate supervisor, in other words the person who is presumably best acquainted with the employee's work. However, depending upon circumstances, the reviewing official may not wish to entrust the immediate supervisor with this responsibility. In any case, the reviewing official will change or modify the report of the reporting official when such modifications or changes are called for. The reviewing official is automatically responsible for the accuracy of facts and statements which appear on this report. In many cases, especially in smaller units, the reviewing official may wish to fill out the reports himself.

In addition to the reports required above, the following special report utilizing the same form will be rendered:

a. Upon relief or reassignment of the reporting official

b. Upon determination or recommendation that an employee in a field station should be reassigned to another station or returned to headquarters for reassignment or other disposition. Such report will be forwarded so as to reach headquarters at the earliest possible date after such reassignment determination is made. If possible the report should be sent in at least three months prior to proposed reassignment in order that all time possible may be devoted to appraisal and evaluation. Items 1, 5, 6, 7, and 8 will be filled in as far as possible by the reporting official without referral to the employee.

Opinions expressed in the Career Management Report should be fair and accurate. The evaluation expressed is a direct reflection on the professional ability and integrity of the reporting official and must be carefully and accurately prepared if they are to be of value. Biased opinions based on personal likes and dislikes must be scrupulously avoided.

No reports will be rendered covering periods of less than 60 days observed service unless specifically requested. Reports will normally be classified confidential, however the classification may be raised if deemed advisable by the reporting officer.

UNDER NO CIRCUASTANCES IS THIS REPORT TO BE SHOWN OR DISCUSSED
